

Susquehanna x FMAA Stock Pitch Competition

Case Brief Overview

At Susquehanna, our analysts combine strong fundamental knowledge of the stocks in their coverage with a keen eye for upcoming catalyst events. Preparing for these events, by building a deep understanding of the events and their potential impact, creates opportunities for our trading desks to act on.

Your task is to pitch an ASX stock (either long or short) with a catalyst event in the next 3-6 months that you expect to be meaningfully impactful to the company. The pitch should be kept to 5-10 slides (including appendix) and include the following:

- Your thesis: Outline your reasons for being long/short, including your projections for the financials of the company, industry dynamics, and any other factors that influenced your decision to take a position in the stock
- Catalyst event:
 - An overview of the event
 - The potential outcomes of the event (keep this to a maximum of 5 outcomes). Each outcome should be assigned a probability, and a range for the impact to the stock. For example:
 - Scenario 1: Phase 3 trial successful. P() 50%. Impact +2-5%
 - Scenario 2: Phase 3 trial unsuccessful. P() 50%. Impact -2-5%
 - Your estimate of when the event will happen, presented as a timing distribution. For example:

Supreme Court ruling on XYZ Corp's mining operation	p()
January	20%
February	20%
March	25%
April+	35%

- Explain how the catalyst event factors into your thesis, and how the outcome of the event may change your view of the stock.

Extra Tips

- Ensure you are accounting for a complete set of possibilities
 - The probability of outcomes should sum up to 100%
- Identify when the event is happening
 - If there isn't a set date, provide a distribution of times and justify
- Have a look at your expected value of moves/stock price
 - If it implies a large expectancy, either the market (or you) is wrong
- It's fine to be uncertain
 - Highlighting outcomes where you are more/less confident in moves is valuable information to a trader
